Started as a hobby in 1979, Zagat Survey is now the world's leading provider of consumer survey-based information on where to eat, drink, stay & play worldwide. With ratings and reviews based on the opinions of over 350,000 surveyors from around the globe, Zagat Survey has become the world's most trusted source to help consumers make informed decisions about restaurants, nightspots, hotels, attractions and other leisure activities. Zagat Survey is based on a simple premise – that the shared opinions of thousands of avid consumers with real experiences are inherently more accurate than the opinions of just one or two critics. Through our guides, we give people the power of a collective voice and the information to make smart decisions.

Zagut has done its usual good job in a handy, easy to carry book that guides you to restaurants in DC, northern Virginia suburbs, Baltimore, Annapolis and the Eastern shore. Restaurants are listed by location, with maps that help both locals and tourists. There are some interesting indexes, giving the names of places to eat that have fireplaces, or are historic, or have late dining. The new trend in food trucks/carts is covered, which is really a big help in DC. If you have gotten Zagut books before there is nothing new or different here, except for an updating on their restaurants and their prices. They are pretty accurate, including taking out those that have gone out of business, which has been pretty volatile in this economic climate. The one complaint I hear about Zagut is that it is for expensive places, but this book includes several locales that are very moderately priced: Chick and Ruth's in Annapolis, Amicci's in Baltimore's Little Italy where the locals eat, Mitsitam Café in the American Indian Museum which not only has different food, but you can feed your family cheaper than you can at other museums where you just get hamburgers or pizza. When you realize what you can spend at a fast food place, this book can guide you to better food and dining for just a bit more.
