Morning Meeting is the perfect way to begin the day. Imagine a classroom where children have fun working together as a classroom community and active learning goes on from the moment the students enter the classroom. That's what classrooms that use the Responsive Classroom model look like. --Linda Biondi, 4th grade teacher and MiddleWeb contributor

Roxann Kriete and Carol Davis each bring decades of experience as educators and deep knowledge of the Responsive Classroom approach to their writing of this book. Both have had long affiliations with Center for Responsive Schools, developer of the Responsive Classroom approach, and have been actively involved over the years with the development and refinement of Morning Meeting and other Responsive Classroom strategies.

I've been using the ideas and strategies in this book with my 7th graders. They actually like this idea of a daily check-in even if it is very short. I can tell they are pressured by their peers to do well, sit quietly and listen to each other which is hard for my students. I'm so glad I purchased this book and I will use it every year from now on. It has really helped build a safe environment to share in my classroom.

It's a very easy, interesting, inspiring read! I can't wait to try what I've learned this school year.

It's given me a lot a good ways to start my 5th grade class room day!

This is an excellent and practical book. There is a great explanation for why morning meetings are important as well as solutions to common problems and suggestions for tailoring your morning meetings to suit your situation.

Enjoyed reading this book

Over my tenure as a teacher, I've tried different methods and activities to start off the day. This tops the list. Morning group gatherings have made a drastic difference. It will definitely help students trust one another, and promote academic and social growth.

If you are into the "Love and Logic", this is great way to start your morning with your class and to end the day. Don't tell me that you don't have time. Make the time and I promise your kids will love you and your day will be easier!

Amazing book with all that you need to create a responsive classroom.
